ABOUT

Alone?!?!?

Mates, my long-time readers may have caught on by now that I am an enthusiast for traveling alone. But this trip, I could have done with a little company. Through a series of unfortunate circumstances (mentioned in another post), I lost my map. Here in this vast wilderness, I was completely alone with no map to reference! I was under a gum tree (in trouble)! I have never felt so isolated, so insignificant, so...alone. For someone who usually hates being alone, this was a new experience!

A BLISTER, A BANDICOOT,
AND A BIG GUST OF WIND,
OR HOW I LOST MY MAP

Suddenly, a glorious sound echoed through the air: the sound of a bickering family. This kind family put aside their squabble—who ate the last bag of crisps—to lend me a hand...or rather lend me their extra map.

How about you? When was the last time you felt isolated? Was there anyone who stopped to lend a helping hand? A kind word? Their extra map? Answer in the comments.
